ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

[0090]   A foreground color for a digital image is automatically determined by dividing the colors of the pixels of at least a part of the digital image into a number of color clusters in a color space, and for at least one cluster selecting a color being related to the at least one color cluster according to predetermined criteria.